

Beyond the Columns

The Song of Solomon compares the love between a man and a woman and the desire we have for a close relationship with our God. In the entire Lectionary sequence there are 156 Old Testament passages listed as potential lessons about which to preach. Only one of them is from Song of Solomon. We preachers tend to shy away from any mention of the book in our preaching for many reasons. It never mentions God. It is almost entirely poetry with no plot whatsoever, and where some Christian writers have compared the relationship described in the poem as an allegory to Christ's relationship to the church, that is a bit of a stretch. As I read it again, however, 2:8-13 did bring to mind a spiritual lesson that could be far more instructional for our lives than writing or reading romance novels. Amidst all the imagery of leaping gazelles and peaking stags there is the call to "Arise, my love, my fair one and come away. For now, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone. The flowers appear on the earth; the time of singing has come, and the voice of the turtledove is heard in our land. The fig tree puts forth its figs and the vines are in blossom; they give forth fragrance." It brought to mind memories of the first moments you laid eyes on the love of your life. Suddenly your senses reach a new heightened state where you see everything from a new perspective. Food at your favorite restaurant tastes even better because of the person that is with you. The movie you go see seems even funnier because you have someone to laugh with you. The world comes into a new focus because you see it through the beautiful eyes of your beloved. Everything you do seems more fun, lovelier, and positive. The possibilities of life seem endless.

The language of the Song of Solomon reminds me of looking into the eyes of your new born child. The beauty and love you see in their eyes help everything seem more hopeful. Your heart seems to expand exponentially as you stare into your child's partially shut eyes and think of all the fun, all the heartaches, and all the wonders of the world you will experience again while watching your child grow, learn, and explore the world on their own.

Love of another person can compel one to arise and come away from a world where "I" am the center of my own universe to a world where "We" are the center of existence. The two worlds are as different as the Spring is from the Winter. The loneliness of the winter is filled with cold harsh winds. When you are in love, the winter is exchanged for the beauty of the gentle breezes and life-giving showers of the spring. The "We" centered world is made even better when God is part of the "We".

Human relationships are wonderful and life-giving. They help broaden our emotional horizons. The people we are in relationship with, either by blood, marriage or friendship, can transform our level of understanding to a great extent. But, when we come into relationship with God our hearts and minds and souls expand to such an extent that no physical body can contain them. No piece of fiction can ever truly describe the type of love that a relationship with God through Jesus Christ brings. Poetry does not do it justice and prose can only begin to tell the marvelous story of walking in faith with our Lord. We are to grab hold of the kind of love that comes from a relationship with Jesus Christ as passionately as a bride and groom staring into each other's eyes. We are to live our lives in a close personal relationship with Christ as if our lives depended upon it -for indeed they do.

In Christ,

Dr. John

I have come back from my 'Walk About' and am ready to go and make the Crop Hunger Walk of the Danville Area a great one this 11th year. Thanks to all who have supported this great mission throughout the years. We will walk again on Sunday, October 7th at 3 p.m. from Ballou Park and will again have the children's choir of Danville sing before we get going on our 1 or 5K walk to change lives with our efforts and donations. An email will follow to invite you to register online, so watch 'this' space and I will man the Crop Walk table in the juice room every Sunday after church so you can sign up or donate. Did you know that $24 is good for a 1-year supply of nutrition packets for 20 children, promoting healthy development and preventing lifelong health problems?.... (Blooper joined us as we promoted the Crop Walk at the last Home Game of our own Danville Braves August 23rd).

EXTRA EXTRA READ ALL ABOUT IT..... Sundae Sunday! Sunday, September 16th, hot off the press The New Membership Directories. So, come fix your Membership Directory to take home and we'll fix you a Sundae as a treat to say 'thanks for your help'.

STEWARDSHIP IN ACTION

In last month's "Stewardship In Action", we highlighted a special form of stewardship practiced by Linda Copeland. This month we'll highlight the contributions of CB Strange. CB, a long time member of our church, has served on both the Diaconate and Session and has currently been the Clerk of Session for over 15 years. CB, along with Carol, support many church functions including Wednesday night dinners, the Outlook Sunday school class, and church picnics. He supports Sunday worship services by operating the sound system and serves the Presbytery by attending meetings. Outside of church, CB supports the community by volunteering his dental skills at the free clinic. CB's support of his church and the community illustrate the true meaning of stewardship. Thank you CB!

The Presbyterian Women will supply the Free Clinic with a meal for their volunteers on the Tuesdays of this month. The 11th will be by the Coordinating Council, the 18th by the Day Circle and the 25th by the Evening Circle. We are very grateful to be able to continue this mission for yet another year.
